Health, Safety & Environment

April 2013

With reference to its activities of design, development, production, supply and installation of a wide range of cables, accessories and systems for numerous applications in the energy and telecommunications industries, as well as the provision of related services, Prysmian Group considers the protection of employee safety, health and welfare and of the environment as one of the primary, essential prerequisites for the organisation of its activities, in order to create value added for all the Group's internal and external stakeholders.

To these ends, all Group Companies are committed to the following principles:

- to comply with applicable legal requirements and to observe the commitments made in defence of health, safety and the environment;
- to manage their activities by adopting health, safety and environmental management systems conforming to international standards, with a commitment to making continuous improvements;
- to optimise the consumption of energy resources and raw materials and to prevent pollution by identifying, monitoring and reducing the environmental impact of their processes/products;
- to identify the hazards associated with their activities, to assess the potential injury and health risks and to eliminate them through appropriate preventive measures, or to minimise them by adopting systems of collective and individual protection;
- to involve every level of the organisation and everyone who works for the Group by ensuring that responsibilities and operating procedures are precisely defined, appropriately communicated and the object of specific training;
- to communicate and disseminate information about health, safety and the environment to internal and external stakeholders, and to raise awareness about energy efficiency, in accordance with specific procedures and programmes both locally and centrally.

The present policy is made publicly available and distributed to all Group Companies.

Prysmian Group is committed to the continuous improvement of its policy and programmes and adopts procedures, rules and instructions to ensure that the values embodied in this policy are reflected in the conduct of each company and in that of its employees and associates.
